While creating this beautiful salsa, we thought of the village of Moapa, and how it was once a field of corn, squash, chile, and peach trees heavy with fruit. In the early 1900s, the people built permanent rock structures in the fields of Moapa, and for hundreds of years, the people lived under the stars and tended to their fields. At that time, the Pueblo was a vital part of the community, and the fields overflowed with nutritious vegetables, which the Pueblo peoples had traded for centuries.

Indian Summer Salsa is a fresh and natural salsa complement to any meal. It is intended to be enjoyed as a dip or as a topping for grilled chicken, fish, or vegetables.
